GENEALOGY OF
THE CALVERT FAMILY

Cortland, New York, Branch

By Dr. John B. Calvert, 1914

C. Crossman Calvert, 1960

The name Calvert is an historic one in Yorkshire, England. It has been a well known name in York since the eleventh century. Some authorities claim that Calvert was a name brought to England at the time of the Norman Conquest, and others that it antedated in York the date of that conquest. (Lord Baltimore) Leonard Calvert who, with his brother Cecil, came to America and founded the city of Baltimore, was born at Kepling, Yorkshire in 1582. There are a number of families bearing the name of Calvert now living in York (1914) and moss grown tombstones of these ancestors are to be found in the burying grounds.

The Calverts of Armagh, County of Armagh, Province of Ulster, Ireland are descendants of Rev. Henry Calvert, a Presbyterian minister who migrated from Yorkshire, England, or from over the border in Scotland, in 1623 and settled in County Down. One authority says he migrated from Scotland. He was probably English with an infusion of Scottish blood. He married a Miss Blair of Scotland, whose brother was a Presbyterian clergyman at Bangor, County Down. He refused to conform to Episcopacy and was put out of his church in 1636. Under James I., and later under Charles II., because of a strong policy of religious repression, Ulster received a large immigration from Scottish and English settlers, as America in more recent years received a large influx from Ireland.

The Calverts who migrated from Yorkshire to Armagh and later to America and the Lord Baltimore Calverts were presumably of the same stock. There is a tradition among the Calverts of Cortland that the two families sustained friendly relationship and exchanged visits in the mother country. The Calverts now living in Armagh and Dublin are children of John Calvert, who died in Armagh on November 19, 1873, lineal descendants of the Calverts of Yorkshire.

John Calvert, the head of the Cortland Branch of the Calvert family came to America from Armagh with his three sons in the year 1792. After a six weeks voyage our ancestor arrived in New York City with a capital of a half guinea (about $2.50) to begin business in this new land. The family remained in New York for a few years. The father was a Scotch Covenanter of extreme type, and, in order to be in close proximity to the Scotch Covenanter and Presbyterian colonies, he sailed up the Hudson with his family and located on a farm in Washington County. Whether his wife came with him to America, who she was and where he found her we have no means of knowing. We do not know her Christian name, nor where she died nor where she was burried. There is no tombstone to her memory in the little cemetery at South Cortland where our great grandfather is burried and no inscription save his own upon the stone that marks his last resting place. The presumption is that our great grandmother was living at the time of the migration to America and that she came with her husband and sons for we know that altogether there were seven children while there are but three mentioned as coming to America. There were six sons; John, William, Nathaniel, Robert, Alexander and Thomas and one daughter, Margaret. Great grandmother may have died and been burried in Washington County.

With the opening of the new century, bourne along by the tide of immigration that had been moving westward from New England since the close of the Revolutionary struggles, John Calvert purchased in 1800 a Soldier's Land Claim, known as Lot 82, a plot of 300 acres of thickly wooded land, including the present site of Virgil, Cortland County, and moved on to it. He was among the earliest settlers of Cortland County. The hardships and privations which the family had to endure were those incident to the life of all pioneers of a hundred or more years ago.

After clearing away the forest, building a log house, and making other needed improvements, the farm was sold and a tract of land purchased including what has long been known as the LeRoy Gillett farm, southwest of Cortland. Here again a log house was built and improvements made, after which the place was sold to advantage and purchase was made in 1806 of 150 to 200 acres situated a little south of South Cortland, forming a part of what is still known as the 'Calvert Homestead'. In this house John Calvert lived only about two years, for his end came peacefully in 1808, after a laborious, honorable and highly useful life. He was a man much esteemed for his good judgment, nobility, integrity and exalted standards of life. He sleeps in the little cemetery at South Cortland.

Upon the death of his father, John Calvert, Jr. succeeded to the headship of the family. William and Nathaniel found homes in Crawford County in western Pennsylvania, Alexander lived and died in Cayuga County. Thomas went to Illinois some time about 1840. Robert settled in Livingston County. The only daughter, Margaret, married Thomas McKee and lived in Cayuga County. John was a family name and the oldest son was usually named John.

John Calvert, Jr. was seventeen years of age when he landed, with his father in New York and, consequently, thirty-three when he succeeded to the headship of the family. He had married Isabella Story, 'a woman of rare good sense, great strength of character and earnest piety' and being equally yoked together, they looked out upon life with resolute courage and faith. NOTE: Isabella Story's father, William Story, served with General George Washington during the Revolutionary War so all of the Calvert lineage are elligible to join either the Sons or Daughters of the American Revolution. Shortly after assuming his new responsibilities he bought an adjoining farm making, with what he already possessed, a choice tract of from 350 to 400 acres. Subsequently other additions were made until he had about 600 acres of most fertile soil.

Some of this land remains in the hands of the Calvert descendants until this day (1914). In 1831 John Calvert, Jr. built a large frame house south of South Cortland which the family occupied until all of the children were married. He accumulated a large property for his day. After a brief illness he died on June 6, 1846 in the seventy second year of his age. His widow, who survived him, died on July 22, 1858 and now sleeps by his side in the Cortland Rural cemetery.

Grand father and grandmother were members of the Scotch Covenanter church at Sterling, New York, a small hamlet near Lake Ontario, that being the nearest to South Cortland of any church of their faith. In their religious life they lived up to all that the term 'Scotch Covenanter' implies. They were most scrupulous in maintaining private and family prayers and rigid in the observance of the Sabbath. Nothing but works of necessity and mercy were permitted on that day. No cooking was done, the dishes not washed, the beds not made and the cows were milked but once on the Sabbath.

Since the Sterling church was seventy miles away they could, as a rule, attend no more than the 'Yearly Meeting' at which time the Sacrament of Holy Communion was administered. All sat down to long tables which were covered with white linen cloth. It is quite possible that some of the younger members of the family did a bit of courting while in Sterling for five who were born at South Cortland found their mates in Sterling.

One member of the Sterling church, who was not quite so strict as our grandfather, was brought before the Session accused of being drunk, a most serious matter. During the deliberations of the Session the question was raised, "When is a man drunk"? and it is recorded in the minutes of the Session that a man is not drunk if he can sit on a straight back chair, one without arms, and conduct Family Worship without falling off the chair. Somewhat more liberal than the blood count of 1960.
